

Indirect Improvisation Presentations

Just the lessons please!

Improv is the most effective when it is experienced by participants and everyone is a part of the play and laughter. Like anything else it is a time investment. In fact, in our experience it takes a group roughly 40 minutes to “drop their armor” so to speak, before we see members fully embracing play within the training. In our Corporate Improv Trainings, we like to engage every employee and strive to make sure everyone walks away with solid interactions.

Sometimes, teams don't have the time for a two-hour engagement, have too many participants, or they simply want to add some of the lessons and insight improv can provide to an already existing itinerary. This is where our Indirect Improvisation Presentations come in. Think of this as a TED Talk about improv. One of our highly trained facilitators will present on an improv topic and choose only a handful of your employees to help demonstrate lessons.

Presentations can be booked to fill up to an hour and will be tailored to meet your engagement goals. We also do free consultations to see if/how this offering can support your efforts.
